Announcing our final 5 Manufacturers Show Items

With a passionate focus on high quality craftsmanship, innovation and cutting-edge technology, The Upper Deck Company revolutionized the trading card experience in 1989 and raised the standards of collectible cards to a new level. Packs from the company's first baseball set featured color photography, an anti-counterfeit hologram on every card and foil wrapping. The set was an instant hit with collectors.

In 1992, Upper Deck launched Upper Deck Authenticated (UDA) and created the world's first patented autograph authentication process in the industry. Sensitive to the fact that forgeries in the marketplace make it difficult for consumers to get authentic signatures of their favorite athletes, UDA built its reputation on a patented five-step process that guarantees fans are getting the real thing because company representatives witness every single autograph. This groundbreaking process is why some of the most prominent names in sports such as Michael Jordan, Tiger Woods and LeBron James have signed deals with the company.

Over the years, Upper Deck has evolved from a trading card manufacturer to a worldwide sports and entertainment company. Today the company is still dedicated to its original mission: to create products that capture the excitement of sports and makes them a collectible experience for fans.

Bushiroad

In 2007, a new entertainment company was born in Nakano-ku(Tokyo), a district which is fast becoming a new center for entertainment sub-culture in the footsteps of the Akihabara district of Tokyo. Bushiroad Inc. plans, develops, and sells many kinds of collectable card games. Currently, we have progressed smoothly and in just our first few years of business, we have had sales of 300 million yen. We are projecting nearly 5 times that level in the current year!

Why is our collectable card game in such high demand? Two reasons: one is that those who used to play "Pokemon" and/or "Yu-Gi-Oh" cards (both mega-hits that were well known among kids living in Japan) have now grown up but still wish to play card games. The other reason is that it is not novel anymore to have collectable card games as part of a new animation/video game content release, so there are always new users entering the scene. Therefore, the card game user population in Japan is on the increase. So what do we do? By collaborating with some content owners in Japan, we provide card games such as: Weiß Schwarz - Sunday V.S. Magazine, and the follow-up game - Victory Spark - Chaos TCG - AlicexCross and our latest venture into a new kids card game - Cardfight!! Vanguard!

In Japan, new manga, animation, video/online game, and figure content is being created all the time. The popularity of this content is spreading internationally, spawning new trends such as "cosplay (costume play)". We provide new value by fusing trading cards with well-known content. Bushiroad's office is in Tokyo and currently serves Japanese clients, but we are eager to share our fantastic cards all over the world.

Auction Items:

- 1 Fate Zero Weiss Schwarz Trial Deck
- 1 Madoka Magica Weiss Schwarz Trial Deck
- 1 EB-01 Comic Style Box
- 1 Kai Deck Case
- 1 Aichi Deck Case
- 1 XL Bushiroad T-Shirt
- 1 Bushiroad Gift Bag

Grab Bag Items:

- 1 Sword Art Online Asuna Weiss Schwarz Promo Card
- 1 Vanguard Flash Fight Deck

Show Special:

- Save 10% off any Card Fight product in stock

Hobby Insider (www.hobbyinsider.net) was established in 2003 as a community for sports card collectors to trade over the internet in a safe manner. A recipient of the 2010 Upper Deck Social Media Award as a top trading card online community, the site has grown into one of the hobby's most respected destinations. More than 2300 Hobby Insider members have safely completed over 70,000 member-to-member transactions that are moderated by designated members who are online trading experts. In addition, Hobby Insider has its own internal two-way feedback system to help ensure members remain accountable for their trading etiquette.

But Hobby Insider is more than just a trading site. It is also a lively community where collectors gather to talk about the hobby, show off their collections, and interact with staff from the card companies (they are members too).

Come talk to Jeremy about how online communities impact your business and the potential they offer all industry stakeholders.
